Hailey is a Partner with the firm's litigation and dispute resolution group. She maintains a broad commercial litigation practice with areas of focus in real estate litigation, professional liability, and contractual disputes.

Hailey is a passionate advocate and a natural storyteller, with a talent for distilling complex legal issues into simple terms. Hailey has acted as counsel for businesses and individuals in a wide range of matters before all levels of Court in Ontario, in administrative tribunals, and in private arbitrations. Clients appreciate her pragmatic and results-oriented approach.

Hailey summered and articulated with Foglers and re-joined the firm as an Associate after working at a boutique litigation and land development firm in Toronto. She also has previous experience in commercial real estate, employment, and insurance defence law at boutique firms in Toronto and in her hometown of Kingston, Ontario. Hailey received her Juris Doctor from the Faculty of Law at Queen's University, where she served as the President of the Queen's Law Cancer Society and the Communications Director for Juris Diction, the law school's student-run newspaper. Prior to entering law school, Hailey earned her Bachelor of Arts in English Literature from McGill University. Hailey regularly volunteers her time with Pro Bono Ontario providing legal advice on civil litigation and landlord and tenant matters to low-income Ontarians.
