Laheen recently graduated from the University of Windsor's Faculty of Law.

Prior to law school, Laheen graduated from McMaster University where she had earned a degree in Justice, Political Philosophy, and Law with a minor in Biology.

Her diverse interests continued throughout her legal studies as she became involved in experiences aimed to improve the lives of equity-deserving groups. Such experiences include her contributions to Windsor Law's Wilson Moot Team, her position as an editor for both the Civil Procedure and Practice Textbook and the Windsor Review of Legal and Social Issues, and her continued volunteer contributions.

Outside of her work, Laheen enjoys spending her days in art galleries, cooking for her family and friends, and regularly debating the merits of philosophical theories with unwilling family members.
